sadece öğretici el yanma yazmasan de oynatacaktır yazılm The Dothraki, a nomadic people from the west of the world, arrived to the Riverlands and South during the Age of Heroes. They have a deep hatred of House Targaryen, for the supposedly evil ways they had brought to them during the lifetime of King Viserys II Targaryen, son of Aegon I the Conqueror. They believe the Targaryens are the source of the "three evil kings" that they say founded and ruled Westeros, and show no mercy to anyone considered to be of their blood. The Dothraki are led by the Dothraki Khals, or "kings", who are considered to be heroes amongst the Dothraki, and the Dothraki's greatest warriors. While the Dothraki don't have any kind of long-standing tradition of civil law, they are a violent, lawless people who respect no authority other than their khals and their Valyrian masters. The Dothraki have been known to make war on each other, and Dothraki khals have been known to attack Westerosi cities without fear of punishment. Within the first few years of the War of the Five Kings, the Dothraki captured five fortresses and sacked some of the smaller ones. However, much of the Dothraki's raiding was considered routine and not terribly successful. They were massacred by Victarion Greyjoy at the Battle of the Fords of Qohor. In King Aegon V Targaryen's reign, several Dothraki raiding parties crossed the narrow sea, most notably at the sack of the Tawneyne Town and the Riverlands in the winter of 85 AC. Euron Greyjoy, also known as the Golden Company and the Justice of the East, brought his Dothraki horde to the Riverlands at the beginning of the Redgrass Rebellion. His forces crossed the narrow sea and raided and sacked numerous towns, castles, and forts. In the south, he and his brother and his Dothraki cavalry raided across the countryside, into the Reach and the Vale. The Golden Company continued the fighting until the Battle of Oxcross, where Euron was fatally wounded. Following Euron's death, however, the Golden Company became increasingly fractured as the 82157476af
